When to see us

When you have decided to sell your property, get in touch with us straight away. Let us know where your deeds are and your mortgage details, including account number. We will ask you about your timescale, your buyer, your agents, and about your property history.

What happens next

We will advise on the need for an Energy Performance Certificate if required for your property and give you an estimate for the work to be done. There will be no hidden extras. We will send you our terms of business and a property information form for you to complete and a fixtures and fittings list so your buyer knows for certain what is being sold, and what you are keeping.

When we get your deeds, we will prepare a contract for the sale, and we will send it to your buyer's solicitor with all necessary supporting documents relating to your property and matters affecting it.

Your buyer will almost always get a survey done. We will deal with any issues which may arise, then attend to the exchange of contracts and receipt of a deposit from your buyer. It is only after contracts have been exchanged that both buyer and seller are legally bound.

A completion date for the date of your move will be agreed in the contract as well as the price and the names of the buyer and seller.

After exchange of contracts, we will agree with your buyer the form of the transfer document, and ascertain/establish the amount required to repay any mortgage on your property.

We will make arrangements with you to sign the transfer documents, and prepare a completion of title statement showing you all payments to be made and the balance due to you.

We then attend to the completion of your sale. Your buyer will be given all relevant paperwork, including the deeds, and will pay the balance direct to your bank account. We will release the keys and pay the amount required to redeem your mortgage.

Related matters

Selling your home will often introduce other related legal and financial matters. These may include making or updating your will. We shall be pleased to offer you expert/up to date advice, including tax consequences, as part of our complete professional service.

What you can expect

We pride ourselves on keeping closely in touch with you at all times by use of the best technology available. We care deeply and want your sale to proceed as smoothly and as quickly as possible.
